

8. Shyevin S'ng

Shyevin grew up in a small fishing town in Malaysia where, from an early age, she drew and painted all the things around her. She is entirely self taught and learned her craft by working with other artists, collaborating on installations and sharing ideas as part of the creative community. She settled in Vietnam and has traveled in Europe, Asia and New Zealand. In all these places it was the natural landscape that inspired her. Her paintings capture the beauty of her subject, and reflect the raw quality of nature. She also instills in each painting a reflection of her own life ideals and experiences. In Shyevin's work, texture is equally as important as color, imbuing her work with great depth.

After a few years in Vietnam Shyevin started to wonder about her own self. She is now reflecting on all her experiences of different cultures and her travels. This is the foundation for a new series of self portraits in which she is trying to express all the questions in her heart.
